Dear Hiring Team,

I hope this message finds you well. I'm writing to express my strong interest in a Frontend Developer role at your company

In my previous work, I've:

- Engineered user-friendly, production-grade UIs using HTML, React, and Next.js, collaborating closely with designers and back-end engineers to improve usability and consistency.
- Managed multiple client-facing projects — from responsive landing pages to scalable internal dashboards — by applying architecture best practices and writing clean, reusable code.
- Delivered high-performance interfaces optimized for responsiveness, SEO, and accessibility, while proactively suggesting and implementing technical improvements.
- Led design review sessions, collected feedback, and iterated on UI components to enhance user experience and maintain design consistency.
- Stayed current with emerging frontend technologies, pushing creative boundaries to advocate for users and innovate solutions.

I collaborate well with designers, backend engineers, and product teams — I've written reusable UI components, participated in sprint planning and code reviews, and optimized for performance, accessibility, and SEO.

Here are a few links to my work:

- Coinflick — Crypto marketplace + admin panel
- AITC Homes — Visitor management system
- AITC Company Site — Scalable portfolio architecture

I believe my experience aligns closely with what you're looking for: building high-quality, scalable UIs, collaborating cross-functionally, and writing maintainable code. Thank you for your consideration. I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,
Binaya Bajracharya